Leaf notebooks

A real exemplar of sustainability these notebooks are not just beautiful, they are also sturdy and strong. It shouldn't really be a surprise, after all paper is made from trees!

They are made in the villages of Bali from mango and banana leaves, seed pods, twigs and other local materials, with handmade paper inside.

Saa leaf party plates

Kiss goodbye to plastic plates with these 100% sustainable, compostable leaf plates. These plates are made from a double layer of leaves and are commonly used in the streets of India to serve curries and snacks.

This really is a gift that you can dispose of with a clear conscience. No landfill here, the plates will disappear to absolutely nothing. A great talking point for parties too!

Elepoo paper products

Recycling does not come more hardcore or more fun- packed than this! And, to put anxious minds at ease, there is no unpleasant smell and the paper is perfectly safe.

Note pads, fridge magnets, air fresheners, and hanging signs for all occasions.

Elephants eat around 250 kgs of food a day and this can produce up to 100 kgs of dung.

The paper is probably one of the most ecologically safe papers to make and use. Colours, if added, are made with vegetable and natural dyes. No bleach is used. The waste water is let out in cultivated fields close by... works as a great fertilizer.

Recycled Paper Gift Bags

Special Prices!

We've given these best-selling newspaper bags extra low prices in order to support this fantastic project.

The organisation that supplies these gift bags provides a home for street children and started as a soup kitchen. The older children started making bags from newspapers and scraps of textiles and with the help of a few donations and some street stalls, by 2000 enough was raised to buy an acre of farmland near Delhi.

The children helped to design and build the home and learn vocational skills such as carpentry, stitching, silk-screen printing and management - giving them a sense of responsibility and confidence which is an excellent start to their adult lives.
